

Jyoti Arora, Infectious Diseases Detection and Surveillance (IDDS), ICF/USAID, India

Dr. Jyoti Arora is working as a Tuberculosis (TB) Manager in USAID-supported Infectious Disease Detection and surveillance project awarded to ICF. The project is supporting the National TB Elimination Programme of India to strengthen strategic TB institutions and support the development of an inclusive and innovative system to enhance efficiencies of TB /Drug resistant TB diagnostic care cascade in NTEP. She served as a Microbiologist in Department of Microbiology, National Institute of TB and Respiratory Diseases, which is one of the six National Reference Laboratories under NTEP. She obtained her PhD from Department of Microbiology, All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS), New Delhi. Her major areas of research interest include Molecular epidemiology of M. tuberculosis, TB diagnostics, drug resistance in M. tuberculosis and strengthening/capacity building of TB laboratories. She has several publications to her credit in reputed journals.